

- Many new vaccines will be developed, or be much closer to licensure, for diseases for which effective vaccines do not now exist.

New mechanisms for the more rapid assessment of vaccines proposed for licensure will be in place.

- A reliable supply of all recommended vaccines and a capability to respond to emergencies and emergent threats to public health will be achieved and sustained.
- Information on the costs and benefits of the National Vaccine Plan will be made available on an ongoing basis to the American people.